

NEW SAUCY MAMA MARINADES COMBINE INTERNATIONAL FLAIR WITH WESTERN FANCIES

Pendleton, Ore. (June 15, 2010) – Comfort food is getting a makeover. Thanks to the growing interest in ethnic cuisines, Americans are finding comfort in exploration, if only from their kitchen table. Saucy Mama – the award-winning creator of gourmet condiments – has just unveiled three new marinades that bring a western spin to international flavors.

“As the economic landscape changes, so too have American palettes,” explains Suzie “Saucy Mama” Barhyte. “We may not be able to afford dining at the most exotic restaurants or traveling to the remote corners of the earth, but we can create with flavors to bring that experience home. Our new Saucy Mama marinades were inspired by Asian, Mexican and Thai cultures, but stay anchored with some of our more western flavor sensibilities.”

Saucy Mama’s Sweet Heat Marinade is just one of the new flavors bringing the best of international and local profiles together under one roof. A mix of creamy black pepper and sweet-hot chili sauce makes this new marinade a rich, family friendly marinade for red meats and pork, while also serving as a delicious dip for dumplings and other Asian-inspired appetizers.

Santa Fe Creamy Chipotle Marinade is Saucy Mama’s Tex-Mex combination of ranch-style dressing with spices and sizzle from south of the border. This marinade works beautifully with chicken and shrimp dishes, and serves as an inspired topping for tacos and other Mexican dishes.

With the new Pacific Rim Ginger Dressing, Saucy Mama’s inspiration was homegrown. Not far from the company’s Pendleton manufacturing center is Portland, Oregon – known as an economic and culinary hub of Pan-Asian influence. “Portland has become such a cosmopolitan destination for lovers of Asian cuisine,” Suzie explains. “We always make time to visit our favorite sushi and dim sum destinations when we are in town. It was a natural progression to pay homage to some of our favorite Asian flavors by creating a dressing and marinade that represented our region.”

With the addition of Saucy Mama’s latest marinades (MSRP: $6.00 / 12 oz. bottle), the company now counts more than 25 finishing sauces, marinades, mustards, dressings and cocktail condiments to its expansive lineup. For more information, visit www.Barhyte.com.
